FULL ATTENDANCE AT MEETING FOR NATURAL GAS DISCUSSION

Possibly one of the best attended meetings of citizens for many months was held at the Council chamber on Friday evening last for the purpose of discussing the "party of the second part" of the contract for the installation of a natural gas supply system into the city of Wainwright.

He was accompanied by Mr. W. Payne, a late member of the North Western Utilities Ltd. (which company put the Viking gas into the city of Edmonton), and that gentleman gave quite a lengthy talk respecting the merits of the gas in particular and the value of the utility to the ratepayers in general.

Several of our ratepayers showed plainly that they had fully studied the question of "to be or not to be" and many were the questions pertaining to the installation and other matters asked of and answered by the above named gentleman.

As a matter of common knowledge there can be no doubt of the benefit of such a utility to our town, aside from the attraction it should prove to the installing of industries here which can be shown the saving to be effected from utilizing the gas for heating, and fuel purposes, and it may be quite in order to give the following story to our readers which dealt thoroughly with the "whys and wherefores" of natural gas and the advisability for its installation in every home in our town.

Natural gas is found compressed in the small cavities or pores in beds of sand or porous rock, called "gas sand" or "gas rock," which lie under the surface of the earth. The gas is forced out of the rock by the pressure of the water in the higher parts of the porous beds. For this reason upflows of the earth's crust may be favorable places to drill for gas. Such folds are called anticlines and domes.

In order that natural gas may be utilized, wells must be drilled to find and develop the gas fields and the productive wells must be connected through transmission lines to distributing plants.

A complete natural-gas system consists of wells which supply the gas, the transmission system which carries the gas to the communities, and the distributing plants which deliver it to the consumers. As each system is planned to meet a different condition of terrain and arrangements differ widely, certain general features are common to a majority of them.

The distribution of natural gas involves the rendering of a service as well as the selling of a commodity, because the distributor is expected not only to furnish gas, but also to deliver the quantity the consumer wishes whenever he demands it.

The demand for natural gas for household use is extremely variable—for example, the quantity of gas used by domestic consumers in January may be six or seven times the quantity used by these consumers in August—and if good service is to be rendered at all times, the capacity of the wells and the transmission and distribution system must be sufficient to meet the maximum demand.

This means that a natural gas system largely dependent upon domestic sales must work far below its capacity throughout most of the year. The cost of supplying natural gas includes the expense of standing ready to serve in addition to the cost of the gas, and payment for natural gas should be on a basis that recognizes both the service and the commodity features and provides that each consumer shall carry his fair share of the burden of cost.

The principles of the efficient use of gas are:

1. The gas must be completely burned.
2. The heat liberated must be transferred with the least possible loss to the air, water, food, mantle or other substance that is being heated.
3. If gas is completely burned, all of the available heat is liberated but this does not necessarily mean that the greatest possible benefit is being derived from the gas. Heat that goes out the chimney or escapes in other ways does not benefit the consumer; therefore such losses should be reduced as much as possible. Appliances should be so designed and operated that the gases from the flame will transfer their heat and be relatively cool when they leave the appliance.

Furnaces, furnace piping, water heaters, water tanks, and ovens should be properly insulated to prevent the escape of heat. The best insulating substance known is air confined in small pores or cells, so that heat can not be removed by air currents. No covering is better than that of perfectly still "dead" air, and the value of most insulating substances depends upon the power of holding small quantities of air in such a manner that circulation can not take place.

Gas burners are of two general types: luminous-flame burners and the more widely used Bunsen or blue-flame type, although the latter are the more widely applicable, and if combustion is complete, each generates the same amount of heat from a given quantity of gas.

The introduction of a Natural Gas Service to the homes of the town of Wainwright will mean the elimination of all the labor accompanying the use of solid fuels. That is, there will be no kindling of fires, there will be no stoking, no ashes to be removed. Gas is a smokeless and ash-less fuel. When the housewife thinks of the amount of dust and dirt caused by the handling of coal and ashes she will gladly welcome the introduction of a natural gas service into her home. Curious, when coal is used, are soiled very quickly and require frequent cleaning would not be soiled at all by the use of gas. Natural Gas Service means COMFORT and CONVENIENCE. Just the correct amount of heat may be had at all times and under all conditions, since Natural Gas the source of heat is regulated by the turn of a tap.

Wainwright homes with Natural Gas installed as far as heating is concerned are placed on a par with the most luxurious central steam heated apartment or hotel.

Natural Gas is economical, since it is burned only when needed.

Natural Gas does not need to be sold on the "wholesale" basis at the prices prevailing in Alberta it would mean a saving over the present costs of fuels used in Wainwright. Those who have once used Natural Gas would, if necessary, be willing to pay considerably more than the cost of solid fuels rather than be deprived of its comfort and convenience.

CANADA'S NEWEST OIL TOWN VOTES FOR PROGRESSION

Although the returning officer for the polling on the gas franchise bylaw on Monday last was not worked very hard, the number of votes polled indicates a great interest taken in the matter of natural gas to the residents of the town and Mr. C. DeVal for the supply of natural gas to the residents.

No less than 116 burgesses exercised their franchise in the matter of voting; and of this number of votes cast, the necessary two-thirds majority as required by section 36a of The Town Act was "away beyond," the final counting of the ballots showing that 109 voters were fully in accord with the project upon the Town Council have concentrated their efforts for a considerable time—viz.: Natural Gas for Wainwright.

As declared by Returning Officer Gowing in his statutory summing up, the result was as follows:

FOR THE BYLAW 109
Against the bylaw 6
Spill ballot 1

Total vote polled 116

This will, of course, prove beyond doubt that The Star's contention that the burgesses of Wainwright are of a progressive mind, and can fully appreciate the strenuous efforts which have been made in their behalf by the Mayor and Council to bring our town into line with the most up-to-date methods of living available.

WAIN. BALL CLUB WILL STAGE BIG TOURNAMENT JULY 31

At a meeting of the baseball club held in the Council chamber on Thursday evening last, the officials came to an unanimous decision to hold a big baseball tournament at the fair grounds on Friday, July 31st.

A new committee was organized to handle this big event, and consists of Messrs M. Forster, W. Pigeon, W. Bibby, J. Gerow, and Mel Fraser.

It was decided to offer $125.00 as first money, with an additional $25 for each game won. The entrance fee was set at $10.00 per team.

But Bill, chairman of the grounds committee, was instructed to get both ball diamonds in shape, and this will be in competent hands.

A new secretary was appointed in the person of Mr. Pete Derbyshire who will be more than delighted to receive donations towards the tournament, and as this is to be WAINWRIGHT'S BIG DAY FOR 1925 the committee are working tooth and nail to make the affair the success it deserves to be.

Therefore, Mr. Citizen, it's up to you to get out and assist in any way you are able to further the efforts being put forth for TOURNAMENT DAY JULY 31st, 1925.

THE EXAMINER'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF PROV. MARKETS

CATTLE

DEEP—Light receipts and common quality of the stock offered had a tendency to put the Edmonton market on the quiet side, and quotations are about 25c lower. Choice very good and choice light steers $5.75 to $6.25; good $5.25 to $5.75; medium $4.25 to $4.75; common $3.50 to $4. The heifer market held steady at $5.65 to $5.75, with some real light making $6.25; good $4.50 to $5.00. Heavily changed place in the market for cows, and quotations on choice butchers are $4.50 to $5.00; good $3.50 to $4.00; medium $2.75 to $3.25; common $2.50 to $3.00. The bull market was firm at $2.25 to $2.50 for choice ones $1.75 to $2.00 for the medium kinds. Vealers are inclined to be slow at $5.50 to $6.00 for choice and $2.50 to $3.00 for common.

FEDERAL STOCKS—Good kinds of feeders were finding an active market at $3.50 to $4.25; stock steers sold as high as $4, but the bulk were from $2.50 to $3.75; stock heifers $2.25 to $3; stock cows $2 to $2.50.

HOGS

Edmonton market is inclined to be unsettled. The long haul north is being sold at $12.25 for light smooth, city cars, others selling at $12.25, with the 10 pc. premium for bacon. Buyers are talking of lower prices.

GRAIN

Wheat prices are unsettled. Some people are predicting high wheat prices this fall, caused by the large increase in the quantity for export from the United States. Nearly every district in Alberta is expecting a good crop.

BUTTER—CHEESE

DAIRY BUTTER—Prices are firm and the raise in prices of creamery cartons and prints and the higher values of butterfat may have a tendency to put dairy quotations up. The warmer weather has had considerable effect on the grading, which has gone down to a large extent the prices paid.

CREAMERY BUTTER—Nearly everyone is busy with fair exhibits to make shipments. CREAM—Quotations have advanced 2c on butterfat in Alberta while Saskatchewan has put their values up, so that they are now a cent below the Alberta price.

POULTRY—EGGS

EGGS—Receipts are reported as being light. Some of the dealers are paying a premium when they want the eggs badly. POULTRY—A few more birds are being handled this week, but for long as deliveries are becoming heavier.

POTATOES

Dealers report hardly any business in last year's crop, which has nearly all been shipped. The old crop was selling firm at $35 when the new ones made their appearance, which forced values up. Quotations on new potatoes are in the neighborhood of $60 to $65 per ton.

LARGEST BUTTER EATERS

Canadians are becoming the largest butter eaters of the world. Twenty-five pounds of butter each for every man, woman and child in the Dominion was consumed last year, a report issued by the Bureau of Statistics shows. Total consumption of butter in 1924 was 254,203,762 pounds. This was an increase of 4,000,000 pounds over the 1923 consumption. Total production was 298,000,000 pounds compared with 277,480,207 pounds this year before. Exports amounted to 22,318,932 pounds an increase of 9,000,000 pounds over the 1923 exportation.

JEALOUSY DRIVES WOMAN TO A UNHAPPY MARRIAGE

Can jealousy drive a woman to an unhappy marriage?

This is a strange question that Booth Tarkington, famous novelist, both propounds and answers, in a remarkable way in "The Turn of Mind," pictured in Hobart Henley's new Universal-Jewel production which comes Wednesday and Thursday.

Tarkington utilizes a trick of fate to make what a first glance seems an impossibility a living, breathing reality, and when reduced to "brass tacks" an intensely logical and very gripping dramatic situation.

The picture shows the inside of an American newly-rich family, crammed with suspicion, jealousy and hate. The daughter of the family engages in a flirtation with a society "lounge-lizard," her jealousy fanned by an affair between this man and her brother's wife finally closes, although left alone, she would probably never have dreamed of marrying the man.

The sinister influence of the jealous sister-in-law runs like a thread through the events of the stirring picture; one man is driven to drink, another to death, through her machinations—and still the herself is apparently a good woman. The play is crammed with such paradoxes; in fact, every character is a human, with all its human contradictions, rather than the stereotyped dramatic form.

MR. JOHN BROWN LOSES FARM HOME IN SUNDAY FIRE

From some as yet unexplained cause fire broke out on Sunday afternoon last on the premises of Mr. John Brown whose farm home some seven miles east of town was quite a pretentious building, and in a few hours was nothing but a smoldering heap of ruins in what had previously been the basement of the premises.

From what can be learned the whole family left the house before noon on a visit to some neighbors home, and around between two and three o'clock the place was seen to be on fire by the very father himself who was passing.

The Brown family returned sometime later only to discover that all their possessions had been lost in the conflagration. The house was possibly one of the finest farm homes in the district being fitted up on a semi-modern plan with its own lighting plant, etc., and will cost a large sum to replace, while the contents, on account of the home being without occupants at the time of the outbreak, are all a total loss also.

We understand that some insurance was carried by Mr. Brown which will in some measure recompense the own for the loss he has sustained.

Such a fine home having been built in 1918 by Mr. W. McKay.

DON'T BE A TIRE MURDERER

By Erwin Treer

Every garage man and experienced motorist knows that misalignment of a car's wheels causes tires to slide, producing friction that rapidly wears out the sturdier tires.

Well known as this fact undoubtedly is, misalignment for some reason continues to be very prevalent and it still the greatest cause of useless tire wear.

Perhaps the reason for motorist's neglect in this matter which affects their purse so seriously is that, while they know of it, they cannot appreciate how much a tire is dragged sideways over the road by a very slight misalignment in the wheels.

It usually surprises the car owner to learn, for instance, that a 30 by 3 1/2 tire, which is out of alignment by only one little inch will actually be dragged sideways 174 feet in every mile.

Should a 34 inch tire, out of alignment one inch, be run 3,400 miles, it will cover 3,300 miles of that distance by turning over and over as it should but it will have literally dragged sideways the remaining 100 miles.

The tire would have to be an exception, indeed, not to be completely worn out by this 100 miles of sheer dragging under the weight of the car. Considering how few car owners take the matter seriously enough to keep their wheels perfectly parallel, there can be no doubt that a large portion of tire expense is eaten up by this useless wear.

One of the most useful things to carry along in the car is a 25-ft length of one-half inch manila rope. In the first place, it is an admirable tow-rope. It can be wrapped around the axle and spring after some of the spring leaves have been broken to get home without breaking the rest of the leaves. The rope can be cut in two and wrapped around to give traction in a mud hole where it would be impossible to fasten chains. The rope can be used even as a tire when the last spare has blown out and will save the rim on the journey home. Always carry one with you.

THROW FROM HORSE RESULTS IN NASTY PERSONAL INJURIES

On Friday last Mrs. Rivers who is housekeeping on the farm of Mr. H. Dowling, sustained a very serious accident when thrown from a horse.

It appears that Mrs. Rivers was riding the animal for the purpose of getting the cows when it possibly stepped into an unseen hole, with the result that the injured lady was thrown violently to the ground and suffered a dislocated collar bone as well as a couple of broken ribs.

Dr. Wallace was immediately sent for and gave the patient all relief possible, and she is now progressing as favorably as can be expected with such a severe injury to recover from.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood
A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

they had been asleep, and the fire out. He shuddered, and for a moment thought got the better of his nerves. He had not intended to shoot except from necessity, but all at once his rifle came to his shoulder and he sent a stream of fire out where the eyes were thickest. Baree knew what the shots meant, and filled with a mad desire to get at the throat of one of his enemies he dashed in their direction. Carvel gave a startled yell as he went. He saw the flash of Baree's body, saw it swallowed up in the room, and in that same instant heard the deadly clash of fangs and the impact of bodies. A wild thrill shot through him. The dog had charged alone—and the wolves had waited. There could be but one end. His four-footed comrade had gone straight into the jaws of death!

He could hear the ravening, snap of those jaws out in the darkness. It was a mad, mad thing. His hand went to the Colt 45 at his belt, and he thrust his empty rifle butt downward into the snow. With the big automatic before him he plunged out into the darkness, and from his lips there issued a wild yell that could have been heard a mile away. With the yelling a steady stream of fire spat from the Colt into the mass of fighting beasts. There were eight shots in the automatic, and not until the plunger clicked with metallic emptiness did Carvel cease his yelling and retreat in to the firelight. He listened breathing deeply. He no longer saw eyes in the darkness, nor did he hear the movement of bodies. The suddenness and ferocity of his attack had driven back the wolf-horde. But the dog! He caught his breath, and strained his eyes. A shadow was dragging itself into the circle of light. It was Baree. Carvel ran to him, put his arms under his shoulders, and brought him to the fire. For a long time after that there was a questioning light in Carvel's eyes. He reloaded his guns, put fresh fuel on strips of cloth with which he bandaged the fire, and from his pack dug out strips of cloth with which he bandaged three or four of the deepest cuts in Baree's legs. And a dozen times he asked, in a wondering sort of way,

"Now what the deuce made you do that, old chap? What have you got against wolves?"

All that night he did not sleep, but watched.

Their experience with the wolves broke down the last bit of uncertainty that might have existed between the dog and the boy. For days after that, as they travelled slowly north, an west, Carvel nursed Baree as he might have cared for a sick child. Because of the dog's hurts, he made only a few miles a day. Baree understood, and in him there grew stronger a great love for the man who was as gentle as the Willow's and whose voice warmed him with the thrill of an immeasurable comradeship. He no longer feared him or had a suspicion of him. And Carvel, on his part, was observing things. The vast emptiness of the world about them and their loneliness, gave them, and their opportunity of pondering over important details and he found himself each day watching Baree a little more closely. He made at last a discovery which interested him deeply. Always when they halted on the trail, Baree turned his face to the south; when they were in camp it was from the south that he nosed the wind most frequently.

This was quite natural, Carvel thought for his old hunting grounds were back there. But as the days passed he began to notice other things. Now and then looking off into the far country from which they had come, Baree would whine softly, and on that day he would be filled with a great restlessness. He gave no evidence of wanting to leave Carvel, but more and more Carvel, but came to understand that some mysterious call was coming to him from out of the south.

It was the wanderer's intention to swing over into the country of the Great Slave, a good eight hundred miles to the north and west, before the mule-trails came. From there, when the waters opened in springtime, he planned to travel by canoe westward to the mountains of British Columbia. These plans were changed in February. They were caught in a great storm in the Wholada Lake country, and when their fortunes looked darkest Carvel stumbled on a cabin in the heart of a deep spruce forest, and in this cabin there was a dead man. He had been dead for many days, and was frozen stiff. Carvel chopped a hole in the earth and buried him.

The cabin was a treasure trove to Carvel and Baree, and especially to the man. It evidently possessed no other owner than the one who had died; it was comfortable and stocked with provisions; and more than that, its owner had made a splendid catch of fur before the frost set in—hinges and he died! Carvel went over them carefully and joyfully. They were worth a thousand dollars at any post, and he could see no reason why they did not belong to him now.

Within a week he had blazed out the dead man's snow-covered trap-line and was trapping on his own account. This was two hundred miles north and west of the Gray Loon, and soon Carvel observed that Baree did not face directly south in those moments when the grange call came to him, but south and east. And now, with each day that passed, the sun rose higher in the sky; it grew warmer; the snow softened underfoot, and in the air was the tremulous and growing thrush of spring. With these things came the old yearning to Baree; the heart-thrilling call of the lonely graves back on Gray Loon, of the burned cabin, the abandoned tepee part, was observing things. The vast emptiness of the world about them and their loneliness, gave them, and their opportunity of pondering over important details and he found himself each day watching Baree a little more closely. He made at last a discovery which interested him deeply. Always when they halted on the trail, Baree turned his face to the south; when they were in camp it was from the south that he nosed the wind most frequently.

In April Carvel shouldered his furs up to the Hudson's Bay Company's post at Lac la Biche, which was still farther north. Baree accompanied him halfway, and then—at sundown Carvel returned to the cabin and found him there. He was so overjoyed that he caught the dog's head in his arms and hugged it. They lived in the cabin until May. The buds were swelling then and the smell of growing things had begun to rise up out of the earth.

Then Carvel found the first of the early Blue Flowers.

That night he packed up. "It's time to travel," he announced to Baree. "And I've sort of changed my mind. We're going back—there."

And he pointed south.

CHAPTER XXX
A strange humor possessed Carvel as

There is only one way to kill all the Flies

This is it—Darken the room as much as possible, close the windows, raise one of the blinds where the sun shines in, about eight inches, place as many Wilson's Fly Pads as possible on plates (properly wetted with water but not flooded) on the window ledge where the light is strong, leave the room closed for two or three hours, then sweep up the flies and burn them. See illustration below.

The right way to use Wilson's Fly Pads

he began the southward journey. He did not believe in omens, good or bad. Superstition had played a small part in his life, but he possessed both curiosity and a love for adventure, and his eyes of lonely wandering had developed a wonderfully clear mental vision of things which a dull or nervous might be called singularly active imagination. He knew that some irresistible force was drawing Baree back into the south—that it was pulling him not along a given line of the compass, but to an exact point in that line. For no reason in particular the situation began to interest him more and more, and as his time was valueless, and he had no fixed destination in view, he began to interest him more and more. Days he marked the dog's course by compass. It was due southeast. On the third morning Carvel purposely struck a course straight west. He noted quickly the change in Baree—his restlessness at first, and after that the dejected manner in which he followed at his heels. Toward noon Carvel swung sharply to the south and east again and almost immediately Baree regained his old eagerness, and ran ahead of his master.

A week later Baree answered Carvel question by swinging westward to give wide berth to Post Lac Bain. It was mid-afternoon when they crossed the trail along which Bush McTaggart's traps and deadfalls had been set. Baree did not even pause. He headed due south, travelling so fast that at times he was lost to Carvel's sight. A suppressed but intense excitement possessed him, and he whined whenever Carvel stopped to rest—always with his nose sniffing the wind out of the south. Springtime, the flowers, earth turning green, the singing of birds and the sweet breaths in the air were bringing him back to that great Yesterday when he had belonged to Nepeese. In his unexpressed mind there existed no longer a winter. The long months of cold and hunger were gone; in the new visions that filled his brain they were forgotten. The birds and flowers and the blue skies had come back, and with them the Willow must surely have returned and she was waiting for him now, just over there beyond that rim of green forest.

Something greater than mere curiosity began to take possession of Carvel. A whimsical humor became a fixed and deeper thought, an unreasoning anticipation that was accompanied by a certain thrill of subdued excitement. By the time they reached the old heathenry had a firm hold on him. From Beaver-tooth's colony Baree led him to the creek along which Wakayoo

PLAIN TALK ON VANITY

The boll weevil may weevil the cotton, the crows may croak with the corn, the frosts may freeze the grain, the droughts may dry the prairies, but we still have with us one great ruinous influence in the economic shuffle, and that is vanity.
Some people call it cheap aristocracy still it is very expensive. We are all more or less guilty. Daughter thinks she just must have a new and different dress for every party. Father simply will not do without a brand new set of balloon tires, while son matches them with balloon pants and throws a couple of perfectly good narrow-bottomed trousers into the discard.
Almost everyone is living beyond his income and knows it. Undue pride ruins our vanity, cheap aristocracy is the cause. We seem not to have mental resources at our command to rebuff the gossiping minded individual who peers at us with a crucial eye if things are not exactly "up to snuff". We seem not to have sense enough to be sensible, and not strong enough to stand "what the neighbors will think". We have gone mad in trying to do like, act like, look like, the millionaires that we certainly are not.
Plain, but true: not Puritanical, but common sense. The shoe fits, let us wear it. Some day, somebody will come along and say the right thing, bring a solution of which we here and now confess a failure. Sometime, someone will invent a slogan that will set us all to thinking, and say the magic words we will all follow; and then if our pride will let us, we will all come back to earth and less vanity.

Laziness is the greatest curse of civilization, and carelessness is next. Don't be careless and get caught with a fire loss to face; see Joe Welch and let him carry the risk.

"TRUTH WILL OUT"

Commenting on the reported number of deaths from the recent heat wave in the middle west and east, a Y. M. C. A. secretary ventures that "at least three-fourths of these deaths were due rather to the ordinary requirements of normal living, so that the sudden heat merely furnished an excuse for their deaths."
There is a great deal of truth in the assertion of this secretary. (Which lead one to surmise as to whether most all men are produced or induced by conditions of improper living and depleted vitality. It is easy, of course, to wind ourselves up in logic by carrying a proposition too far. Just like the doctor who asserts that there is only one failure, simply because the heart stops beating at that, ends it. However, the further statement of the Y. M. C. A. official is worth quoting: then if our "lack of exercise, improper habits of eating, carelessness in observing health habits, excessive smoking, insufficient sleep, and such ordinary causes were undoubtedly back of most of these fatalities; or, in other words, most of those who died from the heat might

MINERAL ADDITIONS TO THE GRAIN RATION OF HOGS

Some valuable information relative to the importance of adding mineral matter to the usual grain rations of hogs has been secured at the Agassiz Experimental Farm during the last two winters.
The mineral mixture used was composed of ground bone meal, 8 pounds; ground charcoal, 5 pounds; ground rock phosphate, 5 pounds; and salt, 3 pounds, at a cost of 27 cents per pound. It was fed at the rate of 3 lb. to each 100 pounds of meal.
In order to test this material, a total of 84 pigs, were divided into fourteen lots of six pigs each. In every ration of grain, the mineral mixture was fed in increased gains were secured. This applied not only when the usual ration was followed but when the meal ration was supplemented.

An increase of six percent of mineral matter proved unsatisfactory and gave similar results to a ration supplied with two percent of rock phosphate.

When other mineral matter is not available, ordinary wood or coal ash thrown on the floor gives good results.

French Canada Celebrates Its History

June 24th of every year is the great day of the French-Canadian. In every city and every hamlet of Quebec Province and in the cities and centres of the New England States and in those parts of Ontario and the West where he has migrated St. Jean Baptiste Day is never overlooked. It is well that it should be so and is introduced into Canada as Old-World seventeenth century atmosphere that Canadians as a whole could ill afford to lose either ritually or historically. Our pictures show some interesting features taken from floats exhibited on this occasion. There is the heroic 17th century farmer defending his land from the Indians which his father and which always figures in the celebration.

Coal Shipments Start in Ontario

Trial shipment of 25,000 tons of Alberta coal to Ontario was started during the past week by the Canadian National Railways. There will be no over-check by government authorities on the costs of handling this shipment but it is expected that the Canadian National Railways will check up the costs. The coal is being supplied by mines in the Edmonton, Pembina and three Hills districts.

American Writers Visit Province

American writers visiting the province at present include Richard Barthe of the Chicago Daily News, who is writing a series of articles on farm life, and other interesting western topics. He is particularly interested in the co-operative marketing movement and secured considerable data on this in Alberta, which was the cradle of the wheat pool. Another visitor is Mrs. Hal Kane Clements of the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

Prominent Dairyman Here

For the purpose of studying Alberta's system of cream grading under government supervision, Dr. George McKay, Secretary of the American Association of Creamery Butter Manufacturers, with head quarters at Chicago, and Prof. F. W. Bouslog, manufacturing specialist with the Beatrice Creamery Co., of Chicago who is doing field work for the American Association, visited Edmonton the past week. They were in conference with Dr. Mackay, Alberta's Dairy Commissioner, securing data on the Alberta system which has been such a success, and has been a big factor in raising the standard of Alberta's export butter.

Calgary's Big Jubilee

Total attendance at Calgary's big stamped and jubilee the past week reached more than 150,000 visitors from all parts of the continent were in attendance, including many special writers and motion picture men to record the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of Fort Calgary by the mounted police. A historical pageant more than five miles long was the opening feature of the jubilee.

Many Elks Visit Province

Several special trains conveying Elks to the convention in Portland Oregon, visited Edmonton during the past week; also the especially conducted party of 110 teachers brought by the C.N.R.

Development in Gas Fields

Another large gas well was brought in the past week in the Viking field East of Edmonton, with a production approaching ten million cubic feet daily. The well will be turned in with the others serving the city of Edmonton.

Activities in the gas fields south of Calgary will include the construction shortly of a "scrubbing" plant to eliminate odors from the gas being brought into Calgary, the construction of an other ten-inch gas line from Turner field into Calgary, and the possible introduction of an industrial rate for the use of gas.

PRINCE ACCEPTS INVITE TO NIPIGON

That the Prince of Wales will again be a visitor to Canada in the fall, it is hinted in a communication from one of his secretaries to Neil McDougall of Nipigon Ontario, sportsman's representative of the Canadian National Railways. It appears that Mr. McDougall has sent an invitation to His Royal Highness to take part in a moose hunt which takes place in the fall, and the reply states that the Prince of Wales will be delighted to join the hunt and that he would certainly call at Nipigon on his next visit to his ranch, which he hoped would be "next autumn." The letter concluded with a jocular remark that the prince trusted Mr. McDougall would not endeavor to "marry him off." This has some reference to an old joke existing between them. Mr. McDougall became acquainted with the Prince of Wales about five years ago, when the heir to the throne received his first lessons in catching speckled trout in the Nipigon river.

SURVEYING GREAT SLAVE LAKE

Owing to the increasing traffic along the Mackenzie valley system of waterways, the Department of the Interior has, for several years, had parties of surveyors at work along the route, particularly in above Great Slave Lake. From these surveys, maps have been prepared which have proved very useful to navigators. Buoys beacons and lights have also been placed along the route.

A new verandah is being added to the J. Rutledge home on Main street.

FLO CAMPBELL.

Plends for Normal Life for Talented Youngsters

New York City.—A warning to mothers of prodigies was recently sounded by Miss Flo Campbell, singer, now appearing in "Artists and Models," New York production.

"Don't let your child give way to a prodigious tendency," counselled Miss Campbell. "If you do, the child will have ample reason to regard you as an enemy rather than as his best friend. I know because I was an infant prodigy myself—the best dancer in dancing school and always pushed forward by the family and my teacher whenever there was company. This was bad for me—kept me excited, self-conscious and or you'll regret it."

The black bear had faded, and thence straight to the Gray Loon.

It was early afternoon of a wonderful day. It was so still that the rippling waters of spring, singing in a thousand rills and streamlets, filled the forests with a droning music. In the warm sun the crimson balneesh glow of the loon, the perfume of the Blue Flowers, in the trees and bushes mated birds were building their nests. After the long sleep of winter Nature was at work in all her glory. It was Unekepesim, the Mating Moon, the Home Building Moon—and Baree was going home. Not to matchood—but to Nepeese. He knew that she was there, now, perhaps at the very edge of the chasm where he had seen her last. They would be playing together again soon as they had played yesterday before, and the day before that, and in his joy he barked up into Carvel's face and urged him to greater speed. Then they came to the clearing, and once more Baree stood like a rock. Carvel saw the charred ruins of the burned cabin, and a moment later the two graves under the tall spruce. He began to understand as his eyes returned slowly to the waiting, listening dog. A great swelling rose in his throat, and after a moment or two he said softly and with an effort,

"Boy, I miss you're home!"
Baree did not hear. With his head up and his nose tilted to the blue sky he was sniffing the air. What was it that came to him with the perfume of the forests and the green meadow? Why was it that he trembled now as he stood there? What was there in the air? Carvel asked himself, and his questioning eyes tried to answer the questions. Nothing. There was death here—death and desertion, that was all. And then, all at once, there came from Baree a strange cry—almost a human cry—and he was gone like the wind.

Carvel had thrown off his pack. He dropped his rifle beside it now, and followed Baree. He ran swiftly straight across the open into the dwarf balsam, and into a grassy path that had once been worn by the travel of feet. He ran until he was panting for breath and stopped and listened. He could hear nothing of Baree. But that old worn trail led on under the forest trees and he followed it. Close to the deep, dark pool in which he and the Willow had disappeared so often Baree, too, had stopped. His eyes shone with a gleaming fire, as he gazed for Nepeese. He expected to see here there, her slim white body shimmering in some dark shadow of overhanging spruce, or gleaming suddenly white as snow in one of the warm splashes of sunlight. His eyes sought out their old hiding places; the great split rock on the other side, the helving banks under which they used to dive like otter, the spruce boughs that dipped down to the surface, and the midst of which the Willow loved to screen her naked body while he watched the pool for her. And at last the realization was borne upon him that she was not there, that he had still further to go.

He went on to the tepee. The little open space in which they had built their hidden wigwam was flooded with sunshine that came through a break in the forest to the west. The tepee was still there. It did not seem very much changed to Baree. And rising from the ground in front of the tepee was what had come to him faintly on the still air: fire was bending a person, and it did not strike Baree as amazing, or at all unexpected, that this person should have two great shining braids down her back. He whined, and at his whining and at his whine the Person grew a little rigid, and turned slowly.

Even then it seemed quite the most natural thing in the world that it should be Nepeese, and none other. He had lost her yesterday. Today he had found her. And in answer to his there came a sobbing cry straight out of the soul of the Willow.

Carvel found them there a few minutes later the dog's head huddled close up against the Willow's breast, and the Willow was crying—crying like a child, her face hidden from him on Baree's neck. He did not interrupt them, but waited; and as he waited something in the sobbing voice and the stiffness of the forest seemed to whisper to him, a bit of the story of the burned cabin and the two graves, and the meaning of the Call that had come to Baree from out of the south.

CHAPTER XXXI

That night there was a new campfire in the open. It was not a small fire, built with the fear that other eyes might see it, but a fire that sent its flames high. In the glow of it stood Carvel. And as the fire had changed from that small smouldering heap over which the Willow had cooked her dinner, so Carvel the officially dead outlaw had changed. The beard was gone from his face; he had thrown off his caribou-skin coat; his sleeves were rolled up to the elbows, and there was a wild flush in his face that was not altogether the tanning of wind and sun and storm, and a glow in his eyes that had not been there for five years, perhaps never before. His eyes were on Nepeese.

"To-morrow or the next day I am going to Lac Bain," he said a hard and bitter note back of the gentle worship in his voice. "I will not come back until I have—killed him!"

The Willow looked straight into the fire. For a time there was a silence broken only by the crackling of the flames, and in that silence Carvel's fingers weaved in and out of the Willow's hair. His thoughts flashed back: What a chance he had missed that day on Bush McTaggart's trap-line—if he had only known! His jaws set hard as he saw in the red-hot heart of the fire the mental pictures of the day when the Factor from Lac Bain had killed Pierrot. She had told him the whole story. Her fight. Her plunge to what she had thought was certain death in the icy torrent of the chasm. Her miraculous escape from the waters—ad how she was discovered, nearly dead, by Tuboa, the toothless old Cree whom Pierrot out of pity had allowed to hunt in part of his domain.

He felt within himself the tragedy and the horror of the one terrible hour in which the sun had gone out of the world for the Willow, and in the silence he could see faithful old Tuboa as he called on his last strength to bear Nepeese over the long miles that lay between the chasm and his cabin weeks of hunger and of intense cold in which the Willow's life hung by a single thread. And at last, when the snows were deepest, Tuboa had died. Carvel's fingers clenched in the strands of the Willow's braid. A deep breath rose out of his chest, and he said, staring deep into the fire.

"To-morrow I will go to Lac Bain." For a moment Nepeese did not answer. She, too, was looking into the fire. Then she said:

"Tuboa meant to kill him when the spring came, and he could travel. When Tuboa died I knew that it was I who must kill him. So I came, with Tuboa's gun. It was fresh loaded—yesterday. And—M'sieu Jeem"—she looked up at him, a triumphant glow in her eyes as she added, almost in a whisper—"You will not go to Lac Bain. I have sent a messenger."

"Yes, Oskimow Jeem—a messenger. Two days ago. I sent word that I had not died, but was here—waiting for him—and that I would be lakwano now his wife. Ooo-oo, he will come fast. And you shall not kill him, Non!" She smiled into his face, and the throb of Carvel's heart was like a drum. "The gun is loaded," she said softly. "I will shoot."

"Two days ago," said Carvel "And from Lac Bain it is—"

"He will be here to-morrow." Nepeese answered him: "To-morrow, as the sun goes down, he will enter the clearing. I know. My blood has been singing it all day. To-morrow—to mor-

A Barrel Canoe for Bathers

Riding the surf behind a speedy motorboat belongs to the thrills of many seashore enthusiasts, but the more timid pleasure seekers usually find enough "kick" in the conventional forms of water sport such as rowboating and canoeing. However, rowboats and canoes are not always available, especially at some small inland lakes, and in such cases a barrel canoe of the kind shown in the drawing is a good substitute.

It consists of half a barrel, cut lengthwise, and an automobile inner tube stretched around it, as shown; these items can be obtained almost anywhere at practically no cost. Each hoop is securely nailed or screwed to the staves before sawing so that the barrel will not collapse when cut through. The ends are then clamped and all screws or nails projecting on the inside cut off and filed smooth. The inner tube is pulled down a few inches below the gunwale and inflated, which will make the craft almost noncapsizeable and unshakable. By sitting in the bottom and paddling, the boat can be propelled along at a fairly good speed, but if the user stands up the boat will have a tendency to rock, and this adds enjoyment as he must then balance it, which is a more or less tedious feat.

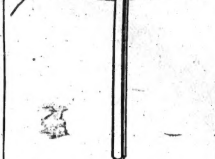

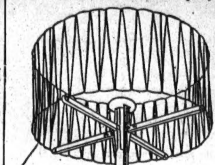

Joining Roofing Sheets

When copper and zinc-roofing sheets come in contact with each other in the open atmosphere, there is a certain amount of electrolytic action and this starts corrosion. This can readily be prevented by coating the copper and zinc with roofing cement or acid-proof paint, the connection between the two metals cannot be avoided entirely. Zinc should never be used on a roof to be covered with red cedar or redwood shingles, as acid is now estimated to total more than $1,000,000,000, according to a report of the National Bank of Commerce in New York. The total miles of electricity for residential, industrial and public-utility uses for 1924 amounted to approximately $1,333,100,000, a sum $65,100,000 greater than that of the preceding year.

Circular Aerial Is Non-Directional and Works Inside or Outdoors

A new type of antenna, which, owing to its circular shape, is claimed to be non-directional and to result in equally good reception from all points of the compass, has appeared in England. It is designed for either indoor or outdoor use. It consists of two rings supported on an upright by means of two crossarms. Special braided copper-wire tape is wound from one ring to the other in such a manner that practically the entire surface is exposed to the incoming radio waves. It is claimed this type of aerial will increase the range of many receivers.

Half of Nation's Electric Power Now Used in Homes

Although the first incandescent lamp was not marketed until about 1880, the annual sale of electric appliances for the home is now estimated to total more than $1,000,000,000, according to a report of the National Bank of Commerce in New York. The total miles of electricity for residential, industrial and public-utility uses for 1924 amounted to approximately $1,333,100,000, a sum $65,100,000 greater than that of the preceding year.

Substitute for Binding Pole

Instead of carrying a cumbersome binding pole when hauling hay or fodder, a Wisconsin farmer uses a cable and winch as a substitute. The rope is provided with a hook at each end and is securely attached, at its center, to the winch. This is made from a length of gas pipe and is slipped through holes drilled in the front ladder of the wagon, a locking bar being also provided, as indicated, to keep the crank from turning after the rope has been drawn up tight. In use, the rope is brought over the load in the usual way, the hooks being fastened to the wagon frame at the rear, and the winch then used to tighten the rope over the load.

row—for he will travel fast, Oskimow Jeem. Yes, he will come fast."

Carvel bent his head. The soft tresses gripped in his fingers were crushed to his lips. The Willow, looking again into the fire, did not see. But she felt—and her soul was beating like the wings of a bird.

"Oskimow Jeem," she whispered—a breath, a flutter of the lips so soft that Carvel heard no sound.

If old Tuboa had been there that night it is possible he would have read strange warnings in the wind that whispered now and then softly in the treetops. It was such a night; a night when the Red Gods whisper low among themselves, a carnival of glory in which even the dipping shadows and the high stars seemed to quiver with the life of a potent language. It is possible that he would have said:

y possible than old Tuboa, with his twenty years' experience, would have come forty miles when he strode out into the clearing where Pierrot's cabin had stood. Twice from the edge of the forest he had called; and now, when he found no answer, he stood under the light of the moon and listened. Nepeese was to be here—waiting. He was tired, but exhaustion could not cure fire that burned in his blood. It had been blazing all day, and now so near its realization and its triumph—the old passion was like a drunken wine in his veins. Somewhere near where he stood, Nepeese was waiting for him. Once again he called, his heart beating in a fierce anticipation as he listened. There was no answer. And then for a thrilling instant his Albert H. MacCarthy, will return in time to report to the Alpine Club. Lake O'Hara has been painted by the late John Singer Sargent and by Carl Jungius and Richard M. Kimbel, the two latter are New York artists and members of the artist colony that summers at Banff. Lake O'Hara threatens to rival Lake Louise whose close neighbor it is.

The Alpine Club's main objective this year is to climb Mt. Goodwin, the highest peak visible from the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the ascent will be made from a sub-camp.

Last year's initial Pow-Wow of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies was held in Yoho Valley near Field, B. C. Two days of trail riding and social gathering in a big lodge in the evenings were enjoyed by more than 200 members and novices, the latter qualifying for membership, one of the requirements of which is to have ridden fifty miles over Canadian Rockies' trail. Dr. Charles D. Smith of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., is the honorary president of the Trail Riders' club.

Several hundred trail riders are expected to take part in this year's meeting, which will be held Aug. 8-10 inclusive. The start will be from Banff and Lake Louise by motor to Marble Canyon where the horses and guides will be in waiting for the three days' ride. Program as follows: first night, tent camp on Goodwin Plateau, 6,500 feet above the valley; second night, tent camp on the shore of Lake O'Hara, circling Lake Louise in beauty, but of a wilder type; third night, Tipt Camp beside Lake Wapta and Fox-Wow held in Sun Dance Lodge. There will be a sing-song each night in camp.

Riders must bring either a sleeping-bag or two warm blankets. A change of underwear and warm coat or mackinaw for the hours around the camp fire, is all the equipment that is necessary. No grips will be accepted. A word of caution, unless one is prepared to rough it he should not ride; but if one delights in the feel of a saddle and pony, be, or, as he may be a Trail Rider.

The Rocky Mountains Guides' Association, an organization of all the guides in this territory, with headquarters at Banff, is looking after the arrangements for horses and guides.
